Ancestry Goes To Colonial Days

Early colonial history is touched upon in an obituary published upon the death of Mrs. Arabella Ball Shirley, mother of Mrs. Harry Melville Roberts of Torrance. The following extracts are from the Point Pleasant Daily Register, published at Point Pleasant, West Virginia, where Mrs. Roberts went to attend the funeral of her mother.

Arabella Ball Shirley's paternal ancestry, through Thomas Ball, her father, goes back to early colonial days to the family of Mary Ball Washington, mother of George Washington. Her maternal grandfather was Peter Hogg, a native of Augusta county, Virginia, a son of Captain Peter Hogg, who came to Virginia in 1745 from Scotland. Captain Hogg received his commission the year before General Braddock's defeat and death at the hands of the French near Fort Duquense. Under Governor Dinwiddie's proclamation of 1754, Captain Hogg was given a grant of eight thousand acres of land for distinguished military service during the war between England and France. The land selected was close to Point Pleasant, where the French had but five years before Dinwiddie's proclamation buried one of their leaden plates claiming possession of the Ohio valley, and but a few miles north of a similar grant to George Washington on the Great Kanowha river.

It was upon part of this maternal homestead that Mrs. Shirley spent her girlhood. She early in life became a member of what was then known as the Presbyterian church of the United States of America. Her husband preceded her to the grave, but she leaves to mourn her loss four children: T. G. Shirley, of Seattle, Washington; A. J. Shirley, of Fairfax, Oklahoma; Mrs. Samuel Windon, of Point Pleasant, West Virginia; and Mrs. H. M. Roberts, of Torrance, California; one sister, Mrs. Martha J. Rice, of Point Pleasant, West Virginia; and six grandchildren.

NEW ORANGE RECIPE
BY PAUL GERMAINE

California Sauce for Caponage
Take the juice of six large California oranges. Boil until it gets to the consistency of cream. Add to it six yolks of eggs and whip up on a slow fire till it gets thick. Then pour slowly half a pound of melted butter, stirring continuously. Season with cayenne pepper, salt and add some grated orange rind. Finish with the juice of a lemon.

PAUL GERMAINE

Appreciation of one of California's noted products is reflected in a new recipe originated by the famous French chef, Paul Germaine, of the Red Star liner, Belgenland—American owned and the newest of the de luxe ships on the Atlantic—which plies between New York, English Channel ports and Antwerp.

Monsieur Germaine was formerly chef at the Hotel Continental, Paris, and later at the Savoy, London, both fashionable caravansaries catering to Americans. Now he is directing the catering on the Belgenland.

Germaine has evolved a system for the Belgenland by which first class passengers may have à la carte service with distinctive dishes and an elaborate continental bill-of-fare, instead of the time-honored steamship table d'hôte, familiar to all travelers.

Chef Germaine is a strong believer in the food value of California's oranges and one of the first dishes he invented for the Belgenland's table was a sauce having California orange juice as its base.

Elks Round Up 800
Pounds of Brown
Beans For Rodeo

Who said "beans?"
Yea, brother, there is going to be more beans at the Elks' Round-up to be held at Topanga Beach June 2 and 3, than has ever been brought together for a gathering of this kind.

Eight hundred pounds of the little brown Mexican kind, imported direct from Mexico for no other purpose than to tickle the palate of the hungry mob.

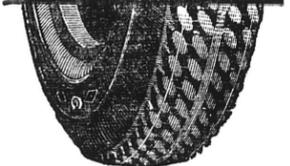

This info was spilled this morning by Andy Andrews, chairman of the bean committee, or I should say rations committee, and he went galloping around the country to find somebody to put on the cooking festivities.

Then who should run athwart his fair dreams but Signor George Remero, and his ten Frijole artists, who enjoy the distinction of being the world's leading bean jugglers. So right away George and his gang were signed up to do the bean act and he promises to put on a feed that will make Poncho

Villa turn green with envy and start on another wild expedition. But that isn't all. George says he is going to have them (meaning the beans, of course) all dolled up with Mexican akempucky. He calls it chili and rises up to remark that it is the best in the land and concocted from his own private recipe.

The beans are only a part of the big free feed that will be given during the afternoon of the 3rd.

The ticket sellers report a land office business and present indications are that the show will be attended by a record breaking crowd.

PRINTERS DINE HERE

Members of the Harbor Franklin Club of San Pedro, Wilmington, and Torrance held their regular monthly meeting in Torrance last Friday evening. They dined at 7:00 o'clock at the Golden West Cafe and were so well pleased with the dinner and service that they voted to hold the July meeting here again.

The week-end was enjoyed at Topanga Canyon by Mr. and Mrs. J. G. Gay and family, of Arlington avenue.
